Foreword

We are pleased to present the sixty-third volume of the Mennonite Yearbook and Directory. This volume is quite different from earlier editions, in that the organizational changes within the Mennonite Church adopted at Kitchener, Aug. '71, are reflected in the plan of the Yearbook.

The new church structure emphasizes the centrality of the congregation; it has given birth to five, new, geographic regions. But with the new regions the conference districts are still intact. The 1972 Yearbook begins with the congregations in the regions; the next section reflects the traditional conference organization.

It is after the congregations and their ordained leaders are listed, that the Yearbook moves to broader church organizations and the persons involved in them. The 1972 Yearbook is a resource for names and places and numbers. But more, it is an educational tool to help persons understand the new Mennonite Church structure. Thus it will be helpful to have a copy of this Yearbook in every home, pastor's study, church library, and desk of persons involved in church work.

Editor Miller and his secretary, Faye King, have overcome almost insurmountable difficulties to bring the 1972 Yearbook into being. They have received much help from Paul N. Kraybill, Executive Secretary of the Mennonite General Board.

The 1972 edition of the Yearbook is not the final word. Many changes will need to be made in future issues — changes for which there was neither time nor imagination in the 1972 issue. Therefore, suggestions from users about ways to make future volumes more useful are indeed welcome!

Congregational Literature Division

And Thanks to Ellrose

Special recognition goes to Ellrose Zook, who edited Mennonite Yearbook from 1943 to 1971. Ellrose served as a consultant on the current edition and will retire from Mennonite Publishing House in 1972. Although Yearbook information is dependent on voluntary help from many, many unnamed people every year, Ellrose's persistence and patience in soliciting and arranging the data have been key factors in its production for 28 years.

The Mennonite Church 1972

PAUL N. KRAYBILL

General Secretary, Mennonite Church General Board

Reflecting on the past year brings into focus many happenings. There has been a fresh blowing of the Spirit, a new concern for our relationships to each other, and a growing conviction for evangelism. The rich gifts and resources God has given the church through its people, its youth, women, minorities, laymen, and aged have been rediscovered. The brotherhood has expressed new readiness to honestly share and search together in facing new opportunity. There have been structural changes, new flexibility and new forms at the congregational level, and a new search for involvement on the part of each member.

To be honest about the negative, one must mention gaps in communication, a lack of common understanding, and a polarization in attitude and conviction.

Some things have ended, for instance the annual meetings of large program boards, General Conference and its committees, and annual Mission Board meeting.

Some things began anew, although it may be better to say that a process of change continued, occasionally breaking out into moments of visibility as structural changes were implemented and organizational patterns shifted.

1. The Congregation. Theology and practice have an uncanny way of avoiding each other. The idealism of our theologians who have talked about the centrality of the congregation, and the reality of our congregations where the brotherhood gathers have often been too far apart. Whether or not structure was the problem, some efforts have been made to correct this. But structural change will not in itself resolve the issue. There is a hopeful sign in the growing concern throughout the brotherhood for more involvement. Organization has been too remote, administration too far away. Denominational programs were too often designed with too little reference to the actual needs of the congregation. Effective involvement in decision making was lacking, with consequent loss of loyalty and commitment.

A shift to a new emphasis on the congregation is an attempt to focus on the two or three who are gathered in the name of Christ with Him among them. There the process of discernment, decision making, teaching, worshiping, administering, reconciling, witnessing, and serving must begin. Unless this basic group of believers is a vital and effective group, every level of church life beyond this will be the weaker for it. If the congregation becomes alive with the presence of Christ, then church organization and life will take on new direction and purpose.

2. Intermediate Levels. The congregation is central and life begins at the point where believers gather for discernment and decision. No congregation, however, is independent nor can it exist in isolation. Congregations need to reach out for brotherhood in a larger perspective beyond their own immediate location. Congregations need to reach out to each other for sharing of resources, gifts, and convictions. Congregations need to reach out to other congregations to identify with other members of the body of Christ to do those things that they cannot do alone.

The new organizational pattern intends to provide a place where this larger circle of sharing and concern can take place as a small district, a district conference, or a region. Intermediate level organizations provide a locus for those programs and activities which need resources beyond the competence of any one congregation.

In the past the conference has served as an intermediate level organization. Two developments, however, have led to new patterns. (1) A growing number of congregations have not identified with a conference. (2) Conference lines have extended and overlapped, leaving many congregations far removed from the conference with which they are affiliated.

The new organizational pattern encourages the congregations in a given area to relate to each other in new patterns which go beyond conference lines, but without violating conference relationships.

To enable this and to provide a new context for mission strategy, regional boundaries have been developed. The churches in Canada and the United States have been divided into five regions based on population, geography, and other strategic factors.

The regional pattern makes possible a regional assembly representative of every congregation. However, there is flexibility for alternate patterns to emerge where desirable. In some instances the region may consist of district conferences with a Regional Coordinating Committee as a minimum pattern of organization. Another pattern may consist of a series of smaller districts.

The region is intended also as a means of decentralizing and dispersing administrative activities. Hopefully in each region increased responsibility will be assumed for program administration. Those activities which relate specifically to a given area might be organized by the region, thus relating them more closely to the congregation.

3. Churchwide Agencies. The General Assembly replaces the Mennonite General Conference as the churchwide body where representatives of the congregation gather to fellowship, worship, share, and decide. There will be issues and concerns which should be handled on a churchwide basis. There are programs and activities that no one intermediate level organization can adequately administer on its own. There will be those issues on which it will be significant to speak with a churchwide voice. There is the need for agencies to represent the total brotherhood. There is need for a point of reference to coordinate and bring together the work of all the regions.

The General Board and the program boards (missions, education, congregational ministries, mutual aid, and publication) are now structured under the General Assembly. They are the servants of the church, not to direct the church but to respond to the church's needs, provide services and resources and effective channels of communication. In this context leadership and response becomes a two-way communication process so that the churchwide activities always remain sensitive to the needs of the brotherhood in its various congregations and districts.

The process of brotherhood which led to the adoption of the new organizational pattern at Kitchener was reassuring and gratifying. While many uncertainties and questions lie ahead, there was evident an honesty and sharing which the Spirit could use to bring about consensus in finding new direction.

Looking Ahead

It is difficult to predict the meaning of all this. Most important is the realization throughout the church that the new structure does not necessarily resolve problems. Hopefully, however, it will provide a context in which new dimensions of life can emerge. New vision and new commitment must be shared by every member.

The Mennonite Church at the end of 1971 represents a growingly diverse body of people sometimes drawn in many different directions, a composite of persons from many contexts and backgrounds, a variety of sometimes contradictory convictions, assorted styles of life, and varying levels of commitment.

On the face of it, there is hope in the renewal of concerns at the individual and congregational level. There is an evident concern for an appropriate style of life, a new sense of caring for others, and an eagerness to get involved.

There is evident a readiness for change, an openness to the blowing of the Spirit, and a new mood of flexibility in the face of perplexing and complex issues.

In the pressures that descend upon the church, there is hope for the future. Loyalty to the church seems to be increasing. There is a renewed appreciation for our heritage and a significant quest for meaningful relationships and expressions of discipleship.

In the midst of growing polarization, tension, and divisiveness, there are many bonds that are pulling us together. There is a new respect for differing opinions and a new recognition that each of us has much to learn and something to share. There is a growing understanding that institutions must not become solid inflexible structures which inhibit the ongoing process of change and renewal. There is a growing understanding that the church must be the church, that brotherhood is our frontier, and that service and witness must be expressed in every facet of the church's life. There is a growing concern that our brotherhood develops the kind of climate and atmosphere where persons will find fulfillment and together form a vital body of concerned, caring people obedient to Christ.

While a new structure was approved in 1971, the process was more important than the result. The product of the meetings in Kitchener should give some direction to the church's life for the future, but it is not finished or final. The new By-laws are not an end in themselves. The ongoing life of the brotherhood in constant renewal and response will continue to create change. In the process, brotherhood is taking place and the pattern that evolves each time is only significant if it frees the church to be God's people, exercising their gifts as creative members of the body of Christ.

Mennonite Church Financial "Askings" for 1971-72

By J. J. Hostetler
Mennonite General Board

More and more Mennonite congregations are working on budget plans to give and distribute their funds.

District conferences also set up budgets involving local congregations. The "Stewardship for Mission" program is helpful in planning budgets and for stewardship education. Write or call your district stewardship secretary for literature and counsel in planning.

Certain fixed amounts are needed for operational costs of the local church. Likewise our churchwide ministries build their program and services on expected receipts. They, too, have fixed costs to support workers, to serve people in need, and to maintain facilities. These are our extended ministries of evangelism, missions, training, healing, alleviation of suffering, and the nurture of children, youth, and adults.

The amounts suggested here serve as guides to build congregational budgets. Because many smaller congregations often have difficulty to meet these askings, stronger and larger congregations are encouraged to exceed these amounts.

Per Member Amount Needed Each Year

1. Our Mission Through Churchwide Leadership $3.75

A. Mennonite Church General Board $1.75
Gives overall leadership and coordination for our churchwide ministries. Includes Historical Committee and Council on Faith, Life, and Strategy. Provides general office, staff, and field services.

B. Mennonite Board of Congregational Ministries $2.00
Provides resources and services to the congregation in the areas of peace, pastoral ministry, Christian education, youth, and stewardship. Includes staff, field services, and program administration.

2. Mennonite Board of Missions $35.00
Includes foreign and home missions, relief and MCC contributions, voluntary service, broadcasting.

3. Compassion Fund $6.00
A special above-budget asking to provide additional ministries in many impoverished areas. This fund is administered by the Minority Ministries Council in cooperation with the Mennonite Brethren Mennonites.

4. Colleges (Undergraduate Higher Education) $10.00
Includes operating and building funds for Hesston, Goshen, Eastern Mennonite, and Conrad Grebel colleges. (Each congregation distributes its college education funds to the colleges in its own area.)

5. Seminaries (Graduate Seminaries) $4.00
Includes funds for Goshen Biblical Seminary and Eastern Mennonite Seminary. (Each congregation distributes its seminary education funds to the seminaries in its area.) Seminary tuition fees are very low. The major part of the support for our seminary programs must come from our churches.

6. District Conference Needs
Congregations should check with their district conference officers or stewardship secretary for the exact figures for their conference. This usually includes the district conference, its mission board, secondary and elementary schools (if any), WMSC, camps, homes for the aged, as well as other agencies the district may have.

Regional Directory of Congregations

This directory lists Mennonite Church congregations alphabetically by state or province and city. This listing reflects the action that was taken by the Mennonite Church at the Constitutional Assembly and General Assembly August 16-19, 1971, at Kitchener, Ontario. For a complete listing of executive committees and congregations by district conferences see page 33. These regional boundaries are not necessarily fixed nor permanent; nor does congregational listing indicate the degree of participation in the General Assembly of the Mennonite Church. Bishops and Overseers are listed in the Conference Directory.

†Estimate

*This table shows memberships of conferences and missions in various countries. Some conferences include the mission membership in their conference totals while other conferences do not. In order to show all countries where there are members of the Mennonite Church we have listed these countries with their memberships. We have also listed the total membership of each conference whether or not the conference has included the mission membership. Thus the total given at the bottom of the table is not the total of the column because duplication would result should the column total be considered the total membership of the Mennonite Church.

FOUR RESOURCES . . . . that will help adult converts to Christianity and church members to:

discover resources for Christian growth understand the beliefs and development of the Mennonite Church

think through a number of current issues

1. Preparing for Church Membership, by Ernest Martin
   (Leader's manual)
   A guide for up to 18 sessions. Clarifies doctrinal issues and practical problems, suggests a procedure for conducting each lesson, gives directions on how and when to use the resource books listed below. Order one guide for each leader. $3.50.
2. Off to a Good Start, by Ernest Martin
   A devotional guide which contains 30 ideas of interest to the new believer. Particularly helpful in developing the disciplines of Bible reading, meditation, and prayer. A brief glossary of biblical terms is included. $.95, 10 or more $.90.
3. The Christian Way, by John W. Miller
   A study of the Sermon on the Mount which focuses on the significance of Jesus' teaching for our time. Excellent for individual or group study in addition to instructing new believers. $1.50, 10 or more $1.40.
4. The Story and Witness of the Christian Way

for young people in your church

Do you want your youth challenged to be Jesus' followers? To have help in sorting out the complex questions of today? To know that your church is interested in them?

Then consider a subscription to With, the magazine for Mennonite youth that tries to do all this — and more. With is also a forum for young people to try out their ideas about faith and life. It's a resource for finding answers to being 20th-century disciples.

"The majority of the people I know who get With really grow spiritually through it," one young person writes. "It's relevant to living as a Christian in today's society," comments another. Says an adult, "With is just about everything a concerned parent or pastor could wish for."

You can have With come to your youth. A club plan brings it to their home addresses. A bulk order allows you to distribute it to them. With is also available on the Sunday school order blank.

Some churches put With subscriptions for their youth in their budgets just as they do Gospel Herald for adults. Others pick up part of the tab and have the young people pay part. Some make it an MYF project.
